例文范文:

1. While artificial intelligence becomes so advanced, people can use computers to translate foreign languages. That makes learning a foreign language unnecessary. To what extent do you agree with it?

作答:

In recent years, whether people can use computers to translate foreign languages has attracted numerous controversies and drawn the public's attention. Some people believe that artificial intelligence makes learning a foreign language unnecessary, while others hold the view that it is not right. In my opinion, I believe that we should master at least one foreign language.

First and foremost, there are numerous solid reasons why we should learn foreign languages, and the most obvious one is that learning a foreign language can help us to achieve a better career performance in the future. Although the potentially negative impacts of learning a foreign language should also be taken into account, which means that it could be very time-consuming, I still reckon that learning a foreign language can make our lives more efficient. For example, if we can speak a foreign language, our nation can achieve prosperity by opening its ports to trade with foreign countries more easily. It is clearly shown that we can make more foreign friends, if we can speak foreign languages.

Moreover, another factor that should be considered is that we can't always talk with others with a digital device. As far as society is concerned, the ultimate aim of learning a foreign language is to promote our economy by trading with foreign economies. Thus, we should not underestimate the significance of learning a foreign language.

In conclusion, after carefully analyzing all aspects of this issue, I firmly believe that we should master at least one foreign language, because the online resources which can help us to study more efficiently are easily accessed today.

2. Some people say there should be a maximum wage for high-paying jobs. Do you support that?

Can you give your point of view or your own experience?

作答:

In recent years, whether there should be a maximum wage for high-paying jobs has attracted numerous controversies and drawn the public's attention. Some people believe there should be a maximum wage for high-paying jobs, while others believe that it is not necessary. In my view, I support the notion that there should be a maximum wage limit for high-paying jobs.

First and foremost, there are numerous solid reasons why there should be a maximum wage for high-paying jobs, and the most obvious one is that the maximum wage limit can promote social equality. Although the potentially negative impacts of maximum wage limit also should be taken into account, which means that it could harm employees' motivation and reduce social productivity, I still reckon that maximum wage limit could have, in many ways, enormously enriched people's lives. For example, a famous American scientist once said that social equality can make citizens more content about their lives.

Moreover, another reason that should be considered is that we should value the significance of everybody's job. As far as society is concerned, the ultimate aim of the wage is to make everyone enjoy their daily lives. Thus, it is a clear indication that each type of job plays a significant role in social development, and we should treat them equally.

In conclusion, after carefully analyzing all aspects of this issue, I firmly believe that there should be a maximum wage for high-paying jobs, so that we can give some subsidies to poor people.

3.Should parents be held legally responsible for the actions of their children? Support your opinion from your study, observations or experiences.

作答:

In recent years, whether parents should be held legally responsible for the actions of their children has attracted numerous controversies and drawn the public's attention. Some people insist that parents should be held legally responsible for the actions of their children, while others hold the view that it is not necessary. In my view, I support the notion that parents should be held legally responsible for the actions of their children.

First and foremost, there are numerous solid reasons why parents should be responsible for their children's actions, and the most obvious one is that children need to be regulated. Although potentially negative effects of such regulation should be taken into account, which means that parents may suffer higher pressure, I still reckon that children need to be monitored. For example, recent research published on Economists revealed that parents' accompany can play a vital role in children's development. It is therefore clearly shown that holding parents accountable fosters a sense of responsibility, aiding in children's character development.

Moreover, another factor that should be considered is that self-regulation is a vital ability in children's future development, and the explanation for this lies in the fact that it can provide opportunities for children's future career and professional development. As far as society is concerned, the ultimate aim of such requirements is to make young people into responsible people in the future.

In conclusion, after carefully analyzing all aspects of this issue, I would reckon that parents should be held legally responsible for the actions of their children.
